Habit Stacking

Level 7 · Behaviour, Integration, and Habits

Name _____ Date _____

You already have dozens of habits that run without effort: making coffee, opening your laptop, brushing your teeth. Each one is a reliable cue. Habit stacking links a new behaviour to one of those existing habits: "After I [current habit], I will [new behaviour]." The old habit becomes the reminder, so you do not need to rely on memory or motivation.

You do not need more willpower. You need better cues.

PART 1 Your Anchor Habits

List the habits you already do every day without thinking. These will be your anchors.

In the morning

During the working day

In the evening

PART 2 Your Stacks

Link up to three new behaviours to your anchor habits. Keep each new behaviour small enough to do in two minutes.

Stack 1

AFTER I...

I WILL...

WHY IT MATTERS

Stack 2

AFTER I...

I WILL...

WHY IT MATTERS

Stack 3

AFTER I...

I WILL...

WHY IT MATTERS

PART 3 Consistency

Make your stacks easy to keep and easy to return to.

How you will track your stacks

A tick on a calendar, a note on your phone, or your Weekly Integration Map.

What you will do if you miss a day

The rule many people use: never miss twice.

YOUR MOST IMPORTANT STACK

After I …

You do not need more willpower. You need better cues.
